

Maroon 5 - Adam Levine (vocals), James Valentine (guitar), Jesse Carmichael (keyboard), Michael Madden (bass), and Matt Flynn (drums) have released two multi-platinum studio albums (2004's 'Songs About Jane' and 2007's 'It Won't Be Soon Before Long'), scored a string of hit singles ('This Love', 'She Will Be Loved', 'Harder to Breathe', 'Sunday Morning', 'Makes Me Wonder'), won three Grammy Awards, and sold over 15 million albums around the world.

In 2010 the Los Angeles quintet released third studio album, 'Hands All Over' — a killer hybrid of rock, pop, funk, and R&B – which showcases the band's considerable strengths: buoyant, unforgettable melodies, sleek, stylish grooves, charged lyrics about turbulent relationships and crisp, dynamic performances.

Adam Levine, the band's lyricist, began writing the songs that appear on 'Hands All Over' after winding down from a world tour in support of album 'It Won't Be Soon Before Long'. A few months later, Maroon 5 received a phone call from veteran studio wizard Robert John "Mutt" Lange (AC/DC, Foreigner, The Cars), who had heard that Maroon 5 were beginning to write a new album and expressed an interest in producing it. "We didn't even talk to anyone else," Levine says. "Mutt is undeniably one of the most successful producers who's ever lived."

Levine's first performing experience — in fact the event that ignited his desire to become a singer and musician — actually involves Lange. The story goes like this: 20 years ago, when Levine was 10, he attended a friend's birthday party "at one of those places in the San Fernando Valley where the kids dress up in rock'n'roll gear and lip-sync their favorite songs," he says. Levine chose the Def Leppard classic 'Pour Some Sugar On Me'.

"I knew I could sing because my music teacher told me I had a voice, but I had never really performed before," he continues. "I grabbed the mic and just went for it. Afterwards I knew that I've got to do this for the rest of my life. That's what got the whole ball rolling for me." 'Pour Some Sugar On Me' was, of course, famously produced by Lange. "If that's not a full 360, I don't know what is," Levine says. "It doesn't get more circular than that."

In July 2009, Maroon 5 decamped to Lange's studio in Vevey, Switzerland, on the north shore of Lake Geneva where they worked distraction-free with the Swiss Alps looming in the distance. "Just being near those majestic mountains and lakes was so inspiring," says Jesse Carmichael.

“Waking up and seeing these giant snow-capped peaks, it set the tone for the record and made the whole thing feel like some sort of magical summer camp experience.” Adds Carmichael: “Mutt really helped us play to the best of our ability. And it drove us to be bigger and better than ever. Everything he does is huge.”

“Huge” is a good way to describe ‘Hands All Over’, starting with the hard-rocking title track that is heavier than anything Maroon 5 has ever done. Says Valentine: “It doesn’t sound like anything we’ve done so far.” Another stylistic departure is ‘Out of Goodbyes’, a stunning country ballad that features musical and vocal contributions from Nashville chart-toppers Lady Antebellum. “We’ve always loved country music,” Levine says, “and they brought that necessary twang to it with the lap steels, ambient guitar, and Hillary Scott’s pretty country voice.”

Other highlights include the deeply groovy ‘Don’t Know Much About That’, the propulsive ‘Stutter’ (“a great showcase for Adam’s voice,” Valentine says) and ‘Misery’, which will thrill long-time Maroon 5 fans with its funky guitars and high-stepping melody.

‘Hands Like Over’ was re-released in 2011 to include single ‘Moves Like Jagger’; a colossal dance-floor stomper and the sixth biggest selling song of 2011. Featuring the vocals of firecracker Christina Aguilera, it’s wracked up nearly 90 million views on YouTube, dominated the UK No.2 position for nearly two months, equaling the all-time UK record. The LP enjoyed an unprecedented renaissance thereafter, peaking at No.1 in the iTunes Chart.

Maroon 5 first struck it big in 2004 with album ‘Songs About Jane’, which went six times platinum here in the UK and spawned four hit singles: the blockbusting ‘This Love’ and ‘She Will Be Loved’ as well as ‘Harder to Breathe’ and ‘Sunday Morning’. Its success cemented their status as a world-class rock band and led to a 2005 Grammy Award win for Best New Artist.

In May 2007, Maroon 5 released ‘It Won’t Be Soon Before Long’, which debuted at No. 1 on the Billboard Top 200 album chart, selling nearly half a million copies in its first week of release. The Grammy-nominated album featured several hits, including ‘If I Never See Your Face Again’ and ‘Makes Me Wonder’, which earned Maroon 5 their third Grammy, once again for Best Pop Performance By A Duo or Group With Vocals. In 2009, they released ‘Call & Response: The Remix Album’, an 18-track mixtape that featured Pharrell Williams, Mark Ronson, Swizz Beatz, Paul Oakenfold, and many others, putting a new twist on the band’s biggest hits.

Maroon 5 also collaborated with Rihanna on a Grammy-nominated new version of ‘If I Never See Your Face Again’, which appeared on the re-release of the Barbados-born pop star’s 2007 album ‘Good Girl Gone Bad’. Levine has also collaborated with Ying Yang Twins, Kanye West, Alicia Keys, Natasha Bedingfield, Gym Class Heroes and K’naan.

Along the way, Maroon 5 toured the world, including a sold-out headline tour of the U.S., during which they partnered with environmental action organisation Reverb to reduce their carbon footprint. Known for their commitment to the environment, Maroon 5 also became members of the NRDC (Natural Resources Defense Council) and were honoured at the 2006 Environmental Media Awards. They have pledged both time and energy towards Global Cool, an initiative launched to fight global warming by motivating a billion people worldwide to reduce their personal energy use.

“Every record should be like our first, that's the way we think about it,” Levine says. “We don't ever want to rest on our laurels or get too cozy. We always want to keep aspiring to do our best — and ‘Hand All Over’ captures that.”

The band recently launched a Snapple flavour named ‘Tea Will Be Loved’, in support of Feeding America and performed ‘Moves Like Jagger’ and ‘Stereo Hearts’ – a Gym Class Heroes song featuring Levine's vocals - with Travie McCoy on Saturday Night Live in November. They also performed ‘Moves Like Jagger’ with Christina Aguilera and Gym Class Heroes at the American Music Awards that same month. The Group also won their first AMA for Favourite Pop/Rock Band/Duo/Group.

Maroon 5 are in the running for Best International Group at this year's BRITS, following on from their trio of 2005 nominations; International Breakthrough Act, International Album and International Group.

www.maroon5.com